

Did you ever stop to think why it is you are not making a success of something you have taken up and which is not going just the way you want it to? Or, if you are contemplating some venture, and of course, want it to be successful, from what point of view are you looking at it?

The root of success lies much deeper than most of us think. Usually, we study externally. We decide to open a store, and we look about the locality, we are thinking of choosing, to see what the prospect of trade is, what our competition will be.

Or we think of taking up some certain work, and we inquire what the salary is, what the hours of employment are, what is the chance of getting a position.

All these are well enough. But they are superficial elements of success. For the primal root of success, we must look to ourselves. We must find out what is the law of our being. Then, we should put our activities in rhythm with this, and we cannot but swing onward to success. Every force in nature that vibrates in the same rhythm will increase our power. We gather to us such strength that we are irresistible.

Instead of looking about to see if trade will come to our store, we should first look to ourselves to see if we are fitted to be a storekeeper. Is the very essence and law of our being storekeeping? If it is, walls of iron cannot keep trade away. We will attract it by a force that cannot be resisted.

If we are thinking of taking up some special work, we should study ourselves first most rigidly, to see if that is the work of our real self calls for. If it is, hours and salary will be a bagatelle. We'll soon have them to our liking.

We study laws in the physical world. We know they are perfect and unvarying. And we regulate our lives by them. But we give little heed to the laws of the mental or spiritual realms. Yet here are laws just as sure, just as unvarying. In this mental world, we trust to chance. We blunder along haphazard, clutching at this, grasping at that, relying only on instinct, or intuition or desire. Yet there are laws here to help, to guard, or to wreck, if we trespass upon them.

Study then, most searchingly, the law of your being. Pry into the innermost depths of your nature to know what you want to do, what you are fitted to do. And do not be too proud to accept the verdict, if it is not to your liking. For by working according to the law of your being, you will win success. But by going against it, you will be fretted, hindered, have obstacles and hardships to overcome, for which you can see no reason. If you do win to success, it will be by extra effort, and the probability is that you will never achieve the success that would have been yours had your activities been in step with the law of your being. For then, you fall into accord with all the forces that are moving in that direction. There is no friction. All is harmonious. All goes well, as we say. Your work is not only successful, but you enjoy it, and life becomes, not a struggle, but harmonious and happy development.

SOCIAL NOTES OF THE DAY.

Walter as maid of honor, Misses Examiners, March 5.—At a pretty home ceremony, witnessed by half a hundred relatives and close friends, Miss Ruth Waller of Alameda became the bride of John Hugh Clegg of Eugene, Ore., at 8 o'clock last evening. The ceremony took place within a bower of pink roses, dainty greenery and tulle, which was erected in the bay window of the large living room, and pink and green prevailed as the color scheme throughout the decorations.

The bride was given in marriage by her father, Gilbert Waller. She wore a handsome wedding gown of white satin, en train, elaborated in pearls and lace, and completed by a veil, orange blossoms and a shower bouquet of lilacs of the valley. Four sisters attended her, Miss Henrietta Waller as maid of honor, Misses Christine and Esther as bridesmaids, and little Beatrice Waller, who shared the duties of flower girl with her cousin, Emily Ingham. Douglas Clegg of Los Angeles attended his brother as best man.

The maid of honor wore a smart gown of white silk poplin, and the two bridesmaids were becomingly attired in white and pink crepe de chine. All three carried armfuls of pink roses. The two flower girls wore dainty frocks of white and pink, and carried gold baskets filled with roses, from which they strewed the pathway of the bride with rose petals.

The Royal Hawaiian Quintette furnished the wedding music, and Miss Gladys Kaighin, a friend of the bride, sang several appropriate songs prior to the ceremony. An elaborate wedding supper followed. The bride's table was decked in pink roses and pink shaded candles, with water colored name cards of cupids and miniature brides marking places for fifteen.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Waller of Central avenue, formerly prominent residents of Honolulu, and is well-known in the social circles of the Encinal City. She is charming, accomplished, a talented violinist. She met Clegg when studying music in Leipzig. Clegg is a wealthy English merchant, and their wedding trip will include a tour of the world. On March 1 they will sail for Honolulu, from there to Australia and India, eventually reaching London, their future home. The ceremony was originally set for the 14th, but was hastened on account of the imperative departure today of the bride's father for Honolulu, necessitated by business affairs.

Not satisfied with a Christian association of their own the ladies of the city are to invade that of the men in their new building at the corner of Hotel and Alakea next Friday night. But it is to be a peaceful invasion, made upon special invitations from the entertainment committee of the men's institution. There is to be a regular program, and bowling is among the strenuous items of exercise that will be on the card for the entertainment of the fair ladies. Music will be furnished during the evening by Kaala's orchestra.

I am wondering how the Y. W. C. A. will reciprocate. In the absence of a gym or billiard tables it will be rather slow for the boys in a "home" where "fortis," "blind man's buff" or "Ping Pong" are among the most violent of the evening's exercise. It may be suggested that the young women exchange courtesy by having a tennis tournament.

Whatever may be decided upon, I am confident it will be a success, for the women of Honolulu know how to entertain.

For days, ever since the young men settled in their new home, in fact, the young women have cast longing if not envious eyes upon the stately pile on Hotel street. But the Y. W. C. A. will soon have a new home of its own and then there will be no question as to "who's who" in the matter of Christian association buildings.

Mrs. James Pine will be hostess at a luncheon tomorrow at her home in Manoa. Her pretty bungalow will be decorated with yellow roses. The centerpiece for the table will be of the same shade. The invited guests are Miss Julia McStocker, Miss Lydia McStocker, Miss Betty Case, Miss Clara Frank and Miss Alice Cooper.

They have been guests at a number of luncheons and dinners during their stay here, and are among the most popular of the recent visitors to the islands.

The party went south in the private car, Minkawaka. They are all polo enthusiasts, and will remain in Coronado until the end of the tournament.

WILD INVESTMENTS.

Columbus Ohio State Journal: There is a great loss among the people because of their investing in plausible schemes to make money. It so often happens that people will invest their money in some so-called enterprise that some glib agent will make appear absolutely safe, and sure to return large incomes, and in the end lose it all. It is possible the agents themselves believe what they say, but the experience is that they are mistaken many times more than they are correct. The true rule in all these matters is, not to invest in a thing you don't know is all right. Be content with a three or four per cent dividend rather than go floundering through the swamps for a ten or twenty per cent dividend. Such dividends are usually "will-o'-the-wisps" that tempt one to the edge of the precipice and over he goes, money, faith, happiness and all. So common have been these disasters that Kansas has enacted what is known as the "blue sky law," so called because most of these schemes are little patches of blue sky brought down to bedizen the innocent. The law makes it a penal offense for a person to offer shares in any company that is not approved by public authority—a very good law.

A GOOD ATTACK.

SUGAR MEN

and that the directors would be J. P. Cooke, R. Ivers, Geo. H. Fairchild, W. Pfothenauer, M. P. Robinson, F. M. Swamy, E. D. Tenney and A. D. Cooper. All of these gentlemen will serve until after the mill has manufactured and sold its first crop of sugar, thus insuring a proper administration of the company's affairs for the construction period. George R. Carter is also associated with the above named gentlemen and is taking an active interest in the matter, but at his own request was not included in the directorate.

Upon returning from his trip to the Philippines, Mr. Ross filed a report recommending that the project be taken up, as soon as the planters who had signed the preliminary contracts had agreed to the final ones, in which were embodied several changes that were considered desirable, and as soon as other minor matters had been arranged: It was decided to proceed as soon as the required conditions had been fulfilled, in accordance with Mr. Ross's recommendations.

It was necessary, among other things, for some of the agents for the planters to communicate with their principals in Spain before the new contracts could be signed; and to have a law enacted by the Philippine legislature authorizing the Provincial Councils to grant the company certain rights-of-way, water rights, etc. These and other matters of less importance have held the matter back until the present.

A cablegram to Mr. Cooper from the company's representative in the Philippines, received a few days ago, conveyed the welcome announcement that practically everything is in readiness at that end of the line to commence work.

Speaking of the difficulties and delays encountered, Mr. Cooper said: "Probably our requirements in the way of legal safeguards and insisting that all necessary rights-of-way and so forth be arranged for in advance of commencing operations, are considerably more than they are accustomed to giving in the Philippines. At any rate, several times it looked as though the project would have to be abandoned as it appeared that what we asked for either could not, or would not be granted. But the delays seem worth while now that everything fundamental is on a business basis."

"So uncertain has the project seemed that the stock has not been offered for general subscription up to the present time. A number of people, nearly all of whom are directly interested in the sugar business here, and who heard of the matter through their friends, have sent in subscriptions, and more have asked to be notified when it was decided to go ahead."

The capital of the company has been placed at $400,000 divided into 40,000 shares of $10 each. It is planned to issue all at once. The stock will be sold in any number of shares, 10 per cent of the purchase price, that is $1 per share, to be paid on call, and the balance probably at a rate not exceeding 10 per cent per month. Later bonds will be issued for a similar amount.

All of the directors are stockholders, having subscribed for stock on identical the same terms on which that not yet taken will be offered for general subscription, that is at par.

The company's mill will be located less than a mile from the town of San Carlos. Here an excellent harbor, one of the only two on the island, is formed by a projecting point of land and an island, and water sufficiently deep for ocean going vessels will be reached by the company's wharf. This will enable sugar to be shipped direct.

For the present it is planned to construct about ten miles of permanent railroad. A sufficient area will be tributary to this track to enable the mill to turn out about 12,000 tons of sugar in a season.

By the terms of the contract, which runs for thirty years from 1914, the Mill Company is to receive 40 per cent of the sugar produced for hauling the cane, manufacturing sugar and providing containers for same. The planters are at present grinding their cane with antiquated three-roller mills, and owing to the wasteful methods employed, in contrast to the efficient results obtained by modern mills, the company will be able to realize a handsome profit and at the same time the planters will not only be saved the expense of grinding their cane but will receive more from their 60 per cent of the 96 deg. sugar turned out by a modern mill than they now get from their total output of low grade sugar.

The result is that the Mill Company has already received requests from planters in the southern end of the district to be allowed to sign the contracts and it is planned to ultimately grind for all the plantations in the district, which has been estimated to be capable of producing 20,000 tons when fully developed.

The mill will be ready for operation by the latter part of 1913, and, as the cane is already growing, grinding can be commenced at once, so that the company should be on a dividend paying basis in the following year. Many factors, such as the price of sugar and quantity of cane ground, will determine the company's earning capacity. Taking as a basis 12,000 tons of sugar and 3.75c. as the average price to be received, it is conservatively estimated that the profits will be upwards of 30 per cent annually. This should enable the company to pay dividends of from 12 to 20 per cent, depending upon how much of the earnings it should be decided to set aside for increasing the capacity of the mill, extending the railroad, or in other ways enlarging the plant.

The San Carlos project is of particular interest, representing as it does the first instance in which Hawaiian capital will be invested in the sugar industry in the Philippines, and it is particularly fortunate that the initial step should be taken by men who have been instrumental in making a success of the same industry in these islands.
